STEELMILKING SPEAKERS GET ARRESTED THEY WERE LOOKING FOR

In open defiance of strict orders issued by Judge Herbert J. Lerou, Mrs. Eliza both Glendow Evans and a wealthy society woman of Brookline, Mass., attempted to address an open air meeting on Ferry street, Wednesday evening, when the speakers of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Socialist party.

Mrs. Evans, who had started to speak to the crowd and Albert T. Boardman, leader of the local socialist party who refused to move his machine from Ferry street, upon order of Police Sergeant John H. Kane, were placed under arrest by Sergeant Kane and Officer Daniel O'Neil and followed by a crowd of a thousand men, women and children, were taken to police headquarters. Both were released under bond which Mrs. Evans gave for $100 and Mr. Boardman for $50.

The arrest of Mrs. Evans and Mr. Boardman was the first of a series of open air "challenge" meetings arranged for Connecticut cities under the auspices of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Socialist party.

Expectant Crowd Awaits Arrest

The arrest of Mrs. Evans and Mr. Boardman was the first of a series of open air "challenge" meetings arranged for Connecticut cities under the auspices of the American Civil Liberties Union and the Socialist party.

A surging crowd estimated at a thousand clamored and pushed their way down Ferry street to the automobile in which Mrs. Evans and Mr. Boardman were to speak.

The fact that the Socialist party intended to hold the meeting in defiance of Mayor Lerou's order to clear the street was a factor in the crowd's excitement.

The hour set for the meeting, the crowd began to gather. Ferry street and part of Main street was a mass of expectant humanity.

Side walk traffic was blocked. Men, women and children eagerly awaited the arrival of the woman speaker.

Half a dozen men were in the crowd, half a dozen women, and then the crowd would clamor, and push and strain their necks to get a glimpse of the woman who intended to speak.

After considerable difficulty Mrs. Evans and Mr. Boardman succeeded in reaching the car. Boardman's automobile was parked on Ferry street.

Mrs. Evans took a seat in the machine and a few minutes later arose to speak.

"I am one of the old fashioned American women," she said, "and I believe in the Declaration of Independence and I believe the Constitution of the United States guarantees free speech."

Police Give Orders

At this point, Police Sergeant John H. Kane who was standing near the machine with Officer Daniel O'Neil, said to Mrs. Evans: "You must stop speaking."

"Very well," said Mrs. Evans to the officer and to the crowd, "this meeting is adjourned to Steller's hall."

Albert T. Boardman, a leader of the local socialist party, who was recently arrested for attempting to conduct an open air meeting, then said: "If I am not arrested, I will speak at Steller's hall."

"You come with me," said the officer to Mrs. Evans and to Mr. Boardman, "You come."

"What for?" asked Mr. Boardman.

"For refusing to move your machine," said the officer.

Both were taken to police headquarters by the officers, the crowd following, and the charge entered against their names on the books of the city.

Bonds were fixed at $100 each, and were furnished by Aaron Goldblatt.

At headquarters Mr. Boardman admitted that he had refused to move his machine.

For it was he who said on Tuesday night, across the tracks, "If I am not arrested, I will speak at Steller's hall."

Mrs. Evans gave her age as 64 and said she is American born. Mrs. Evans and Mr. Boardman were taken to court this (Wednesday) morning.

Finishes Speech in Hall

As soon as they were released under bonds they headed directly for Steller's hall, trailed by the crowd that had followed them to police headquarters, and then to the hall.

Mrs. Evans completed the speech she started on the street. The hall was crowded to capacity with men, women and children, but before Mrs. Evans had completed her address the crowd had thinned down to some extent.

After the address, Mrs. Evans and Mr. Boardman were taken to court this (Wednesday) morning.

Invites Mayor's Stenographer to Seat

Mr. Boardman called the meeting together and before introducing Mrs. Evans said he understood that Mayor Lerou had secured a stenographer to take notes of the meeting.

The mayor's stenographer promptly accepted the invitation and took the professorial seat amid applause from the crowd.

Mrs. Evans Speaks

Mrs. Evans then made her address, speaking on the topic "Free Speech."
